

Call for Proposals - June 2024

MISSION

The LS3P Foundation was established to support leading design thinkers in advancing research, strategies, and technologies which promote transformative change, improve human and planetary well-being, increase economic mobility, and advance issues of health and social equity across the Southeast.

BACKGROUND

We live in a dynamic world. Unforeseen global events; new technologies; scientific discoveries; and changes in our climate, economy, demographics, and more profoundly impact our society. The world around us is continually shaping where and how we live, learn, work, and play.

The LS3P Foundation's Design Interventions Grant is aimed at helping design innovators anticipate, adapt to, and influence this evolving landscape to ensure a better future. The LS3P Foundation is seeking partners who understand the connection between the built environment and social consequences and desire to help build a better, more equitable future for everyone living in the Southeast.

The built environment encompasses the curated spaces that provide the setting for human activity and is traditionally associated with buildings, cities and public infrastructure, and landscape architecture. The LS3P Foundation acknowledges the connection between the built environment and social outcomes and seeks to promote transformative positive change where the built environment can affect equity, wellness, economic mobility, and environmental health.

"A healthy, equitable community offers complete social, physical, and mental well-being to all its residents at all stages of life. In healthy, equitable communities everyone feels safe, is financially secure, receives a good education, and lives in stable, affordable housing, in neighborhoods that make it easy to be healthy and active every day. These neighborhoods offer a clean environment, access to healthy affordable foods, parks, and public places, thriving small businesses and places to walk, bike, and use transit, and residents are diverse, civically engaged, and socially connected." ⁱ

These are the communities we envision for our nation and more specifically our Southeast region.

GRANT FOCUS AREAS

The LS3P Foundation welcomes proposals for research, technologies, or environments that are aligned with the Foundation's mission, which is built upon the following focus areas for transformative change in our local communities:

1. Health Equity & Human Well-being: –Supporting emotional, mental, and/or physical health and fair and just opportunities for all people to obtain their highest level of health.
2. Planetary Well-being - Supporting the integrity of the Earth’s ecosystem and securing the longevity of the planet for the well-being of all living things.
3. Economic Mobility - Supporting the ability of individuals, families, or groups to improve their economic status.
4. Social Equity - Supporting fairness, justice, and impartiality for all people in social policy and institutions, considering systemic inequalities and working to eliminate them.

These descriptions are not meant to be prescriptive or exhaustive.

The transformative changes we seek require diverse perspectives and cannot be accomplished by any one person, organization, or sector. We want to hear from designers, architects, scientists, anthropologists, artists, urban planners, community leaders, and anyone else who has a new or unconventional idea that could alter the trajectory of our southeastern communities for generations to come.

NOTE FOR 2024 PROPOSALS

Last year's grants were awarded to submissions with a common focus on Planetary Well-being, and specifically Coastal Resiliency. While all submissions are welcome, this year, the targeted focus areas are Health and Social Equity.
